Updated: More Sky Spiral Mysteries in Iraq, Canada and Germany

© 2008 Linda Moulton Howe

"I thought first it was a tornado, but then it started to glow and the stripe become brighter." - Virginia Vater, Gadebusch, Germany

Update 11 AM Mountain, January 15, 2008: January 15, 2008 Edmonton, Alberta, Canada - This is where the "disc" and smoky corkscrew report began in North Tryon, Prince Edward Island, Canada, on December 26, 2007, around 5:45 PM. Return to: January 15, 2008 Earthfiles re: Prince Edward Island Spiral

The CBC story with a link and a video excerpt is:

<http://www.cbc.ca/canada/prince-edward-island/story/2008/01/03/spiral-mystery.html>

Now three more reports have emerged with photographs and video: another from Edmonton, Alberta, Canada; one in Gadebusch, Germany, and video from American soldiers in Iraq of several bizarre vertical "streaks of light" visible on green-colored night vision scope.

1) Iraq

"Strange Lights in the Sky" at YouTube: <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=TiudJENmqUw>

Transcript of military voices watching the green-colored night vision scope:

Voice 1: "There we go - big vertical streaks in the sky. I have no idea what the hell they are."

Voice 2: "Maybe it's unusual encounters (Encounters of the 1, 2, 3 and 4 Kind), or whatever it is - UFO programs?"

Voice 1: "Is that the main one over there?" (Extremely bright vertical streak, brightest of the half dozen also visible further to the right in the scope.)

"If I can get this damn thing open (adjusts scope). Look at this shit!

Earthfiles, news category.

Voice 2: "How big do you see it now?"

Voice 3: "Man, that's weird!"

Voice 2: "Have you ever seen that?"

Voice 1: "Dude, look at it! Come here and look at it."

Voice 4: "Man, that's some weird shit! Look at it! Can you see it?"

Voice 3: "Yeah, there are multiples."

Voice 1: "They are all over the place."

Voice 3: "At least 6 or 7 of them."

Voice 1: "But that's the main one, the brightest one." (brightest vertical streak in scope) And there's some over here. (Panning around). I don't know if it's the way the stars are shining?

Voice 3: "No, I don't think so."

Voice 2: "You also have a red haze over there."

Voice 1: "That's weird!"

Voice 2: "What could it be?"

Voice 4: "I don't want to know."

Voice 3: "There's a red star."

Voice 2: "It's probably Mars."

Voice 3: "It's probably Mars, Chief. It's probably the haze off Mars."

Voice 1: "A vertical streak like that?"

Canada and Germany

Here are the Canadian and German emails with images attached for comparison to the original North Tryon, Prince Edward Island, images (videotape).

2) Subject: Another unidentified smoke spiral in Canada?

Date: January 14, 2008

To: earthfiles@earthfiles.com

"Hello Linda,

My mother (Teresa) who lives in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, noticed this weird 'thing' in the sky at about 5 PM MST on January 7, 2008.

The sun already was setting and darkness falling. She even got her binoculars out and she did not think that it was a cloud. Her first impression was an airplane in trouble, however she said that it stayed in the same position and hardly moved. Although she has a good camera, since it was getting quite dark, she had difficulties holding the camera still enough to take the picture. She said that she was not 100% positive, but looking at it, she thought that twice she saw a flashing light on the inside of the shape (but was not certain).

Dark, spiraling substance above Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, on January 7, 2008, at 5 PM Mountain. Image © 2008 by Teresa.

She told me that it stayed pretty well in the same place for at least 45 minutes. Apparently it moved slowly - very slowly in a northerly direction, which is odd since our prevailing wind normally comes from the northwest. This would make it going against the wind.

She also told me that this shape was truly pitch black and really stood out against the sky, which is what got her attention. She said that it was much blacker than it showed in her pictures. She figured the distance from her home to the object at several miles, maybe more."

2) Subject: Smoke Spiral in Gadebusche, Germany

Date: January 13 and 14, 2008

To: earthfiles@earthfiles.com

"Dear Linda Moulton Howe:

I just read your posting on Earthfiles.com about the "Canadian 'Disc' and Smoke Spiral Still A Mystery" and thought you might be interested in that as well. Event was 11th of January, started apparently around 8:20 a.m. and ended around 8:30 am.

<http://www.svz.de/lokales/gadebusch/artikeldetails/article/215/mysterioeser-absturz-bei-gadebusch-1.html>

I'm an Austrian living in Germany; therefore, if you are interested I could translate for you the basics of that German news article. It seems to me like there might be a similarity concerning that 'smoke' formation."

Translation provided of above German newspaper URL about unusual aerial phenomenon and cell phone image in Gadebusch, a district/city in Mecklenburg-Vorpommern between the cities Lübeck and Schwerin, Germany:

Mysteriöser Absturz bei Gadebusch

12. January 2008 | von Michael Schmidt

What fell from the skies? Was it a comet, a spy satellite, space debris or a UFO? That's the big question for pupils of the Gadebusche grammar school. During their English course, they noticed a phenomenon in the sky: a hundred meters high smoke column and a fire-tail.

"I thought first it was a tornado, but then it started to glow and the stripe become brighter," says 16-year-old Virginia Vater. Virginia and her classmates took out their mobile phones to photograph. Her mate, Ellee Schallhorn, said: "We were all very excited. Our teacher allowed us to walk to the windows and make photos."

Cell phone image of unusual spiraling light phenomenon in sky over Gadebusch, Germany, by student Virginia Vater on January 11, 2008, between 8:20 AM and 8:30 AM local time.

Did they maybe photograph a UFO over Nordwestmecklenburg? "No," Eilleen and Virginia said because they don't want to be ridiculed. Their best guess is that space debris went into the atmosphere and glowed.

The German Meteorological Service Potsdam excluded the possibility that a weather satellite went down: "We are not missing a satellite. Besides that, such a crash wouldn't cause that kind of phenomenon," says Detmar Hartwig from the German Meteorological Service Potsdam.

Linda, meanwhile here is an update in the newspaper January 14, 2008:

Ufo-Forscher im Anflug

14. January 2008 | 11:40 Uhr | von Michael Schmidt

http://www.svz.de/artikel/article//ufo-forscher-im-anflug.html?cHash=eb35fbc91a&no_cache=1&sword_list%5B0%5D=gadebusch

It's basically saying that UFO researchers went to Gadebusch and are investigating. They are Horst-Christian Meyer from Hermannsburg and Dr. Ute Hoffmann from Mufon-Ces. They don't think that it was space debris, and the witness Virginia appears legitimate to them. They tried to calculate a possible site of crash.

Or was it an airplane crashing? Klaus Wiechmann of the police department Schwerin: "We have at the moment no evidence that a plane might have crashed." The Coordination-Central for Emergency Cases in Westmecklenburg also isn't aware of any accident. The Employees of the observatory Lübeck have as well no clue: "If there would have been something sensational, we would have got a notice. But the sky over Lübeck was at that time covered (with clouds)," said Felicitas Rose, Chairman of the Board for "Workgroup of Starfriends Lübeck."

Update: January 15 - Email with more Gadebusch images:

Austrian viewer: Another update for you:

I've found two allegedly "original" cell phone photos in good quality:

<http://hotelimmobilien.hcmi.de/data/DSC00098TiefenLichter.jpg>

Howe's Note: Date was January 11, 2008, between 8:20 AM and 8:30 AM, in the sky near Gadebusche, Germany, grammar school. Students who took images with their cell phones have not discussed the dark image to the right in this photo, or the odd object to the left in the image below. Note the dark and light sections in the close-up below, which explains the comment by 16-year-old Virginia Vater that she saw “the stripe become brighter.”

<http://hotelimmobilien.hcml.de/data/DSC00099TiefenLichter.jpg>

Austrian Viewer: And I've found a statement of one of the UFO-researchers (Horst-Christian Meyer) in one message board, where he - besides stating his theory of the contrail of a fighter jet - mentions a statement of witnesses that the lower end of the "cloud" vanished after some time behind the house from the sight of the observers in the school. He also insists that the witnesses appear legit.

(<http://www.allmystery.de/themen/uf42019-8>)

That "contrail of a fighter jet" theory might be obsolete now because the German Air Force is saying that there were no military jets there at the time ... and Horst-Christian Meyer himself stated that contrails of civilian jets don't look/behave that way usually.
