© 2009 by Linda Moulton Howe

"I picked up my Q-beam, flashed the rapidly moving light for at least a good two to three seconds. The light stopped and without missing a hitch, reversed its course in the very exact same path ... at 400 to 500 mph, came right back to the position in front of me and went out without slowing down."

Update June 26, 2009 / Original report: June 9, 2009 Nashville, Tennessee -

Thirty-six years ago in late February through March 1973, residents in Piedmont, Missouri, were captivated by moving, flashing, jumping, zigzagging lights in the sky. Piedmont is 63 miles west of Cape Girardeau, where the U. S. government allegedly retrieved a crashed UFO in 1941.  See [122802 Earthfiles Archive.]

Piedmont residents reported TV static and stalled cars on highways after unidentified aerial lights flew over. One man reported that he lost his TV signal at the same time his home lights dimmed and his house shook. He went outside and saw an egg-shaped object hovering in the air nearby, emitting a high-pitched sound. His dogs ran away to hide.

Other Piedmont residents reported seeing lights in the night sky that made erratic turns, flashed lights like airliners, but blinked out when real airliners approached. There were even reports of people seeing discs on the ground in fields and glowing objects moving underwater in nearby Clearwater Lake. Local TV called all of it, "the Piedmont UFO."

Cape Girardeau, Missouri, is 72 miles northwest of Nashville, Tennessee.
Piedmont is 63 miles west of Cape Girardeau.

Prof. Harley D. Rutledge, Ph.D., who was Chairman of the Physics Department at Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau, decided to investigate. Prof. Rutledge organized a team of observers with Questar telescopes, sophisticated frequency monitoring equipment and cameras. He called his research effort “Project Identification” and later produced a 1981 book about his question: What were the lights in the sky that seemed to mimic stars, helicopters and airplanes?

Prof. Rutledge named part of the phenomenon “pseudostars.” Pseudostars, he said, were lights pretending to be stars camouflaged by familiar constellations of real stars. But pseudostars moved, and Project Identification caught their stealthy motion in time lapse photographs.

Some glowing objects resembled normal aircraft flashing lights. While other strange, mysterious lights seemed to violate known laws of Earth physics as if flaunting their extraordinary flight abilities. But what baffled Prof. Rutledge most were lights in the sky that repeatedly seemed to react to the Project Identification people observing the lights.

Now in 2009, about 150 miles southeast of Piedmont in Nashville, Tennessee, on the western edge of town, more lights have appeared since October 2008, that also seem to mimic stars, helicopters and airplanes. Retired engineering designer and professional artist, Gary Mansfield, began noticing odd light behavior in October, while looking at the sky from the deck of his Bellevue suburban home on the western edge of Nashville. Since then, over the past eight months, Gary says he has seen at least fifty aerial objects that baffle him and his fiancée, Kim, who has been a second eyewitness on many of the light events - including February 16, 2009, at 9:40 p.m. Central, a straight line of vivid lights suddenly appeared in the sky without motion.

Interview:

“Bar of Lights”

February 16, 2009, 9:40 p.m., Central

Gary Mansfield, Retired Engineering Designer and Professional Artist, Nashville, Tennessee: “And we stepped out onto the deck when it was dark outside, probably around 8:30 to 9 p.m. And she (fiancée Kim) said, ‘Look!’

I looked up and saw three brilliant, round lights, maybe five feet in diameter side-by-side like they were on a bar. They just turned on. They weren’t even moving, but sort of barely rotating from a northeasterly position towards the north. And we were looking right up underneath this thing. The sky was very dark. It was a total pitch black, dark night. We couldn’t see any outline of the craft. It was a couple hundred feet above us at a 60-degree angle. It floated just like a blimp, just barely turning sideways.

Kim asked, ‘Is that an airplane?’

I said, ‘No, it’s too close and it’s moving too slow. I’m going for the camera.’ I went inside, got my digital, turned it on, went back outside and the line of lights had barely moved more than 20 degrees across perpendicular to our deck, just meandering along like a hot air balloon.

Then the lights went out. Then they came back on after three, four, five seconds. Then they went out again. Then all of a sudden, a red light and a green light – very dim – came on, like they were on the wing tips of an airplane and they flashed in a sequential method that looked like they were being toggled instead of being controlled electronically. It was like someone was imitating the sequence. They go off. They come back on again. For twenty seconds, this thing hung directly over our area before it went out of sight.

IT’S AS IF THOSE THREE BRIGHT LIGHTS SEEMED TO COME ON IN RESPONSE TO YOUR FIANCE’S NOTICING SOMETHING IN THE SKY AND THEN THEY CAME ON.

(Reacting) To our very presence, I believe.

“Organic” Spheres Move in Crescent Formation

October 25 - 26, 2008, Midnight Central

We moved to this location (on western side of Nashville) in June 2008. Then in October 2008, I was standing on the balcony at probably around midnight and saw 25 to 30 low lit white spheres that had a very low glow to them in a crescent shape, like a string of pearls. They were coming from the west in my direction at about a half-mile away and they actually flew over my location within 250 to 300 feet. That was a rude awakening because they did not look mechanical. They almost looked biological.

October 25-26, 2008, Midnight Central, twenty-five to thirty, 6-foot-diameter irregularly-shaped spheres that glowed white and moved in a crescent formation over the Bellevue suburb at the western edge of Nashville, Tennessee. Computer illustration © 2009 by Gary Mansfield.

CAN YOU EXPLAIN THAT?

Yes, they moved in an excited state against each other. They had a cloud, a vaporous cloud, around them like they were enveloped in this cloud. And they moved 15 to 20 mph and it was like they knew where they were going. This was 6-foot-spheres lined up in a crescent shape.

THE COLOR?

They were dimly lit from within like a soft white light bulb and as they appeared, my first impression was they were biological.

WHAT WAS THE CLOSEST THEY GOT TO YOU?

I would say within 300 feet.

WHY DO YOU THINK YOU HAD THE IMPRESSION THAT THEY WERE BIOLOGICAL?

There was no sound. Each of the spheres was irregular in shape – they weren't perfectly round. It was like they were maintaining a spherical shape, but somehow had angular edges and corners that seemed to move as they flew by, like there was movement inside as they were flying through the air. These were individual units flying side-by-side, like bouncing off of each other, vibrating, excited. It was very weird to look at.

Mirrored Cigar Rising Vertically

January 9, 2009, 3 PM Central

Soon after that I pursued becoming a MUFON field investigator and have been so since February 2009. Prior to that, I witnessed other aerial phenomena. One, in fact, attracted a black helicopter within five minutes. I don't know who called it, other than the local radar authority. But a helicopter responded within five minutes, and the craft I saw that day looked like the cabin of a passenger airliner without wings, without tail fins, standing straight up and down in the air slowly rising. It looked like the most brilliant silver mercury color I have ever seen, almost polished mirror silver. It was a solid cylinder with a brilliant mercury-colored surface, which was ascending very slowly, almost at the speed of a helium balloon if you let it go, very slowly.

January 9, 2009, 3 p.m., Central, vertical cylinder the color of brilliantly shining silver mercury rose slowly straight up as a dark helicopter arrived. Computer illustration © 2009 by Gary Mansfield.

WHAT HAPPENED?

It got to a certain point and I reached for my binoculars that I had on the deck and was bringing them up to my eyes and about the time I got them to my eyes, it started vanishing. It began to disappear slowly like it was losing the integrity of its visual image and fading out. And I pulled the binoculars up to the location and it was gone, just disappeared.

DID YOU HAVE A SENSE THAT IT WAS THE ACT OF REACHING FOR YOUR BINOCULARS THAT CAUSED IT TO FADE AWAY?

I did since then. I don't know why, but that's the only – I don't know why it would have done that, but maybe it had something to do with it.

WHERE WERE YOU EXACTLY IN THE NASHVILLE AREA WHEN YOU SAW THE 25 to 30 ORGANIC-LOOKING LIGHTS A YEAR AGO AND THE MIRROR-SURFACED VERTICAL FUSILAGE ASCENDING AND DISAPPEARING – ARE YOU IN THE SAME APARTMENT AND BALCONY?

I am, indeed. Mind you, I have seen at least 50 objects, aerial objects, enigmas over the last six months.

“Airplane” Reverses Instantaneously

November Or December 2008, 8:45 p.m. Central

I had been noticing these flashes of lights periodically in the sky at night, which is what got me interested all over again in sky watching for things other than stars and planets. One night about 8:45 p.m., I believe.

WHAT DATE?

I'm not sure. It must have been November 2008. It was cold, very cold. Maybe December 2008, right at the end of the year. But the light just came on all of a sudden, got bright and then receded back to its star-like quality and began moving gradually and picking up speed very rapidly until it was going about as fast as a typical full-throttle passenger plane – I estimated 450 to 500 mph through the air.

I picked up my Q-beam, flashed the rapidly moving light for at least a good two to three seconds, the light stopped and without missing a hitch, reversed its course in the very exact same path that it had just come.

IT DID NOT TURN. IT LITERALLY WENT IN REVERSE?

It literally went in reverse at 400 to 500 mph and came right back to the position in front of me and went out without slowing down. It just turned the lights out.

WHAT DID YOU THINK AT THAT MOMENT?

I was startled because I'm quite aware of what technology can and cannot do and I know that it cannot do that.

SO WHAT DID YOU CONCLUDE?

I concluded that it responded to me and showed me that it could come back and watch or whatever. I'm not sure. And I flashed again, but nothing happened from that point forward.

Light Reacts to Gary Mansfield's Q-Beam

May 26, 2009, 4:35 a.m. Central

WE'RE SPEAKING ON JUNE 2, 2009, WHAT HAS HAPPENED IN THE PAST WEEK THAT EDDIE CALLED ME ABOUT? [ Eddie Middleton, Night Search Radio, Nashville]

This was on May 26, at 4:35 AM. I did an all night vigil, sky watch – had a beautiful, clear night. A stationary flash of light caught my eye at a 45-degree angle southwest. I turned my attention to it and noticed a point of light appear and actually, I flashed it back.

WITH WHAT KIND OF FLASH LIGHT?

With a high-powered Q-beam light. I had been seeing the same light with the characteristic flash in the same area of the sky several times over the last two weeks. So, I decided to try to see if I could invoke some interaction with it. And sure enough, it flashed back. And when it did, I noticed another light start moving toward this stationary light. As it approached it and began to pass it, I flashed it with the light again and it stopped just past the stationary object.

Now, I have two stationary objects. One is maintaining its lit characteristic and the other one is not. So, I flashed it again trying to provoke more interaction and the one that was moving darted off to the southwest. Then, the other light flashes me back, except the flash lasted a lot longer and I can tell it's in my direction.

Then I actually noticed another brilliant light that appeared off to my northwest. It lit up like a Roman candle, which was very strange when you have something that is four times brighter than Sirius. Then it just faded back to a point of light.

Then it started moving across the sky. That chain of events unnerved me somewhat about the reality of the amount of activity that morning. After that, I noticed several more stationary lights light up, almost like a swarm of lightning bugs there for about 45 minutes.

WERE YOU LOOKING THROUGH YOUR CAMERA TO ESTIMATE SHAPES AND SIZES?

Actually, no. I had my binoculars. I did not have my scope set up that night.

WHAT DID YOU SEE THROUGH YOUR BINOCULARS?

The first one that flashed me, I did look. I thought I saw a black mass in the sky that sort of moved in an arc.

WHAT DID YOU SEE WHEN YOU AIMED YOUR BINOCULARS AT THE LIGHT?

Just a point of brilliant light. It was not diffused; it was a brilliant source of light.

SO, YOU ARE TRAINING YOUR BINOCULARS AT THE LIGHT, WHICH IN THE BINOCULARS IS VERY BRILLIANT, AND THEN YOU NOTICED A BLACK MASS MOVING?

This was through the binoculars.

IT APPEARED LIKE A SECTION OF THE DARK SKY MOVED?

No, it was actually darker than the ambient light of the sky.

DID THE DARK SECTION THAT MOVED HAVE A SHAPE?

Yes, it looked globular to me.

WAS IT CLOSE TO THE BRIGHT LIGHT?

Yes, I think it was the source of the light.

Disc Followed Delta Airliner Landing At Nashville Airport

May 31, 2009, 8:30 p.m. Central

WE'RE TALKING ON JUNE 2, 2009. SO, IN THE LAST WEEK, WHAT HAVE YOU SEEN?

The most important one, which is the one I submitted to MUFON, began at 8:30 p.m. on May 31, I began setting my scope up for a night of sky watch. The sky was crystal clear and the temperature was 79 degrees F. I was finishing setting up when my better half stepped out and she said, 'Look! A light just came on near that plane.'

I looked and saw a commercial airliner had descended its approach from the west and was some 30 miles out of Nashville International Airport at altitude of maybe 2,500 feet. The light she referred to was almost suspended in mid-air as the plane continued past it.

I then saw this light slowly accelerate into an arc until it was now flying directly behind the airliner at ¼ mile at nearly the same altitude (of airplane) and at a slower speed. I quickly turned my scope on the airplane to check focus, which was dead on, and then back to the light that was following.

I could clearly see that the object was grey-black some 20 to 25 feet long, estimated, maybe 1/3rd the airliner cabin depth and had a bright, diffused light underneath it. The light did not appear to be a projecting light, but an energy-source light and very brilliant white.

May 31, 2009, at 8:30 p.m., Delta airliner landing at Nashville International Airport with unidentified aerial disc moving behind the Delta plane projecting bright, diffused light beneath it. Computer illustration © 2009 by Gary Mansfield.

Another peculiar oddity is that the object appeared to have a clear, gelatin-like shroud or cloud around it. It almost appeared excited as it flew through the air.

MEANING?

Much like the pearls, the biological thing that I saw, much like it was moving in a – as if you were looking through a fluid container and there was wavy motion.

THIS WAVY MOTION WITH THAT ORGANIC QUALITY IS ABOUT ¼ MILE BEHIND THE AIRLINER THAT IS LANDING?

Yes, ma'am. I have seen this light several times this month. In fact, it might be the same black mass light that I saw in the same vector of sky. If so, I have seen it three times in the past two weeks.

There were only a couple of bright stars out with the moon at this time of day and there was still enough sunset (twilight) for me to recognize it as an inbound Delta flight when I checked my focus.

WHAT HAPPENED?

I tracked the object with my telescope at 35X. The object was roughly 1.25 miles away until I lost it at the edge of the building and it continued on out of view. I have no idea, but very strange it would follow a passenger plane though.

DID YOU TRY TO FOLLOW UP WITH DELTA TO SEE IF ANY PILOT HAD REPORTED ANY UNIDENTIFIED OBJECT DOING AN ARC TO ITS TAIL?

No, not on the plane, I haven't because I had already called the Nashville Airport Authority on the first May 26, incident trying to get some radar confirmation on everything that happened early in that morning. I finally got in touch with the Control Tower and identified myself as a field investigator with MUFON. I informed him I was investigating a case and would appreciate his assistance. And he laughed and said that he was going to consider this call as a prank call and then he proceeded to hang up in my face.

ARE YOU SERIOUS?

Yes, ma'am, I am dead serious. I was very humiliated at that point that he would not take me serious.

THIS IS VERY INTERESTING TO ME THAT YOU ARE PAYING ATTENTION TO A PHENOMENON THAT SEEMS TO BE DISPLAYING ITSELF FOR YOU BECAUSE OF YOUR CONSCIOUSNESS AND WHEN YOU TRY TO GO TO THE VERY PLACES POST-9/11 THAT SHOULD HAVE GREAT CONCERN ABOUT UNIDENTIFIED AND MYSTERIOUS OBJECTS BEHIND AIRLINERS, THEY TELL YOU THEY THINK IT'S A PRANK CALL AND HANG UP.

(Sighs) Evidently.

THINK ABOUT ALL THE IRONY IN THIS POST 9/11.

I like to fly, but now that I know there are things that follow airplanes, I'm not sure that I like it so much anymore! (laughs)"

Nashville Close to Temple Mound Builders

Due west a few miles from Nashville in Cheatham County along the Harpeth River are the mysterious fourteen mounds built by a sophisticated agricultural people as far back as 800 A.D. Two of the mounds are pyramids rising fifty feet high. The mysterious mound builders disappeared around 1400 A.D. without trace or reason. Image © by Joe Allen, Tennessee Parks and Greenways Foundation.

Only a few miles further west of Gary Mansfield's Nashville residence is Big Harpeth River and the mystery of the Mound Bottom culture that lived there around 800 to 1400 A.D. Also known as the Mississippian Culture or Temple Mound Builders, their agriculture was sophisticated and there were fourteen mounds and open plazas. Two of the mounds were pyramids fifty feet high.

Where did the Temple Mound Builders go? Subsequent Nashville populations and archaeologists who study the Mound Bottom culture refer to the mound builders as “a mysterious race of people who invaded the area, built large earthen works, and then abruptly abandoned their large towns and disappeared.”
